

CIVIL DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS

STATE OF LOUISIANA

DOCKET NO. 2004-14710

DIVISION E

JOHN W. HOUGHTALING, II VERSUS CANDYCE C. GAGNARD

MOTION TO UNSEAL PLEADINGS, ORDERS AND JUDGMENTS

Now into Court comes The Independent Weekly, LLC, a Louisiana corporation, domiciled in Lafayette Parish, Louisiana, for the following motion which is filed in both of the above captioned lawsuits which have not been consolidated for hearing but which present identical public record issues and parties (Houghtaling and Gagnard).

Respondents to this motion are the original litigants in the two lawsuits captioned above: John W. Houghtaling II and Candyce C. Gagnard (now Perret).

2.

Time is of the essence due to the fact that Candyce C. Gagnard (Perret) is a candidate for the Third Circuit Court of Appeal which primary election will be conducted on March 25, 2017 (Exhibit 1).

3.

The ex parte relief sought is “one to which mover is clearly entitled without supporting proof” and thus authorized pursuant to the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure article 963.

4.

In the alternative, this matter should be heard on an expedited basis so that the public records at issue may be made available prior to the March 25, 2017 election date.

The entirety of the court record for both of the lawsuits captioned above and another not at issue in this motion (Docket No. 2005-8958) have been sealed from public view, essentially, by agreement of the parties to that litigation and prior to public issues inherent in the voters consideration of a candidate for the Court of Appeals. Louisiana Constitution (La. Const. art. I,

§ 22), its Public Records law (LRS 44:1, et seq) and the seminal case on these issues, Copeland v Copeland, 966 So.2d 1041 (S.Ct. 2007) confirm the right of The Independent and any other person to obtain the records sought in this motion:

Louisiana has a constitutional open courts provision and a constitutional public records provision.

“The provision of the constitution must be construed liberally in favor of free and unrestricted access to the records, and that access can be denied only when a law, specifically and unequivocally, provides otherwise. Whenever there is doubt as to whether the public has the right of access to certain records, the doubt must be resolved in favor of the public's right to see. To allow otherwise would be an improper and arbitrary restriction on the public's constitutional rights.

We have also "defined the limits on the right to privacy [as follows]: `the right to privacy is not absolute; it is qualified by the rights of others ... The right of privacy is also limited by society's right to be informed about legitimate subjects of public interest.'"

Although there may be some justification for sealing certain sensitive evidence in a proceeding, the parties have the burden of making a specific showing that their privacy interests outweigh the public's constitutional right of access to the record. The trial court, should it grant such relief, must ensure that its order is narrowly tailored to cause the least interference possible with the right of public access.”

Respondents are both public persons in this proceeding as a product of their voluntary actions. Candyce Gagnard (Perret) by virtue of her qualifying as a candidate for the Court of Appeal (Exhibit 1) on January 11, 2017. John Houghtaling by virtue of his March 3, 2017 public response (Exhibit 2) contesting the criminal arrest of his then fiancé, Candyce Gagnard Perret, in 2004 (Exhibit 3). The public records arrest export of Candyce Gagnard for “exposure of sexual organs” filed by Sgt. Brian Schultz of the Walton County Sheriff’s Office, records Gagnard’s job title as “Assistant District Attorney.” In his report of the arrest, Schultz wrote, “At this time, Ms. Gagnard stepped out the front doors of the residence and stated to me, you better have all your t’s crossed and your i’s dotted because I’m an assistant district attorney and I also do civil litigation for false arrest.” None of that was true. Gagnard (Perret) obtained dismissal of the charge by participating in the pretrial diversion program.

7.

Months later, former fiancé John Houghtaling filed suit for declaratory judgment against Candyce Gagnard (Perret) under docket number 2004-14710 (Exhibit 4) and again under docket number 2006-01241 (Exhibit 5). The specifics of those actions are unknown due to the orders sealing the records in each proceeding.

Between those two sealed actions, John Houghtaling filed yet another verified petition for an injunction against Candyce Gagnard (Perret) under docket number 2005-08958 (Exhibit 6). That lawsuit is also sealed but the verified petition and the resulting temporary restraining order have been obtained and reveal the court's order (Exhibit 7):

“...requiring Defendant Gagnard [Perret] to stay away from plaintiffs [Houghtaling and Benoit], their residences, their businesses, and schools, cease and desist all telephone calls to plaintiffs, cease and desist all contact with plaintiffs, cease and desist all threats and intimidation of plaintiffs, to not defame or slander plaintiffs or their businesses, and otherwise be restrained from interacting with plaintiffs in any manner either directly or indirectly.”

The only records sought by this ex parte motion are the pleadings (petition, answer, exceptions, motions, oppositions) and the orders or judgments granted. There can be no reasonable expectation of privacy with regard to either party filing those documents into the public record of those declaratory actions. No discovery requests or responses, depositions, affidavits, sworn statements, photographs, videos or other evidentiary items are requested at this time.

10.

In the event that this ex parte motion is not granted and a contradictory hearing is required, it is respectfully submitted that the hearing be scheduled immediately so that the contents of the sealed records are available for the voters to consider prior to the March 25, 2017 primary election. Counsel for The Independent is available to the court and to the respondents at any time in person or by telephone conference.

11.

Houghtaling objects to this motion and requests a hearing. Gagnard (Perret) has not responded to is presumed to object.

Wherefore, The Independent Weekly, LLC prays that its ex parte motion to unseal the public records be granted by the respective District Judge for Docket Nos. 2004-14710 and 2006-01241 and that the Civil Clerk of Court for Orleans Parish be directed to provide copies of pleadings (petition, answer, exceptions, motions, oppositions) together with the orders or judgments granted in the respective actions BUT that discovery requests or responses, depositions, affidavits, sworn statements, photographs, videos or other evidentiary items remain sealed pending further order from the respective courts.

DOCKET NO. 2004-14710

DIVISION E

JOHN W. HOUGHTALING, II VERSUS CANDYCE C. GAGNARD

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO UNSEAL PLEADINGS, ORDERS AND JUDGMENTS

Now into Court comes The Independent Weekly, LLC to support its motions to unseal the pleadings (petition, answer, exceptions, motions, oppositions) together with the orders or judgments granted in the respective actions BUT that discovery requests or responses, depositions, affidavits, sworn statements, photographs, videos or other evidentiary items remain sealed pending further order from the respective courts.

Background

The special election primary for the Third Circuit Court of Appeal is March 25, 2017. Candyce Gagnard (Perret) has qualified and is a candidate for that seat.

Public records from Fort Walton County reveal her arrest in 2004 for “exposure of sexual organs” and her subsequent pretrial diversion to obtain dismissal of that charge.

Public records in two lawsuits (2013 & 2014) involving Candyce Gagnard as attorney of record and/or general counsel for her husband’s business, Louisiana Specialty Institute (LSI), confirm challenges to the authenticity and propriety of charges for medical services provided to plaintiff personal injury claimants by LSI.

Three lawsuits were filed in Orleans Parish by Candyce Gagnard (Perret) former fiancé, John Houghtaling, in 2004, 2005 and 2006. Those lawsuits have been sealed in their entirety and are unavailable for public view or copying.

John Houghtaling filed the 2005 injunction action (Exhibit 6) and obtained a temporary restraining order prohibiting Candyce Gagnard (Perret) from stalking and defaming him (Exhibit 7).

Public Records Law

Louisiana Constitution (La. Const. art. I, § 22), its Public Records law (LRS 44:1, et seq) and the seminal case on these issues, Copeland v Copeland, 966 So.2d 1041 (S.Ct. 2007) confirm the right of The Independent and any other person to obtain the records sought in this motion:

Louisiana has a constitutional open courts provision and a constitutional public records provision.”

The provision of the constitution must be construed liberally in favor of free and unrestricted access to the records, and that access can be denied only when a law, specifically and unequivocally, provides otherwise. Whenever there is doubt as to whether the public has the right of access to certain records, the doubt must be resolved in favor of the public’s right to see. To allow otherwise would be an improper and arbitrary restriction on the public’s constitutional rights.

We have also “defined the limits on the right to privacy [as follows]: `the right to privacy is not absolute; it is qualified by the rights of others ... The right of privacy is also limited by society’s right to be informed about legitimate subjects of public interest.’”

Although there may be some justification for sealing certain sensitive evidence in a proceeding, the parties have the burden of making a specific showing that their privacy interests outweigh the public’s constitutional right of access to the record. The trial court, should it grant such relief, must ensure that its order is narrowly tailored to cause the least interference possible with the right of public access.”

Ex Parte Motion – CCP article 963

The ex parte relief sought is “one to which mover is clearly entitled without supporting proof” and thus authorized pursuant to the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure article 963. There is no need for a contradictory hearing because there is no justifiable basis for sealing the pleadings ((petition, answer, exceptions, motions, oppositions) together with the orders or judgments granted in this lawsuit. Each of those documents state the public record position of the parties and document the relief obtained.

While it is possible that discovery requests or responses, depositions, affidavits, sworn statements, photographs, videos or other evidentiary items could present questions concerning the right to privacy particularly by third parties, no request is made for the release of those documents which shall remain sealed pending further order from the respective divisions.

Exhibits

Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure article 853 "A copy of any written instrument which is an exhibit to a pleading is a part thereof for all purposes."

Conclusion

The petition and the referenced exhibits form the basis for this motion such that it may be decided on its face and without contradictory hearing particularly in light of the extremely limited window of opportunity in which this information relevant to the public may be obtained and viewed.

Thus the relief sought in unsealing the pleadings, judgments and orders is one to which The Independent is clearly entitled and for which there is no good reason to delay.

Candyce Gagnard Perret
P.O. Box 53388
Lafayette, LA 70505

Dear Candyce:

I send this letter of apology: a letter I should have sent long ago:

As you know, almost 15 years ago two officers unlawfully entered my house to investigate the report of a night party we attended on the beach in Florida. I became angry after they damaged property in the home and I mouthed off to the officers. After I told them I was going to file a report against them, they threatened that they could falsely accuse you, without evidence, of being improper at the party. They never saw you at the party, or my home or anywhere else, but they told me they had a report of a girl swimming in the ocean at the party without a top. They said they would return to get even with me. As you know, they returned and falsely arrested you to punish me.

I owe you two sincere apologies for separate things I did wrong that night and in the aftermath. First, I mouthed off to two police officers. As the president of a charitable sheriff's office foundation, I have great respect for law enforcement. I know that tragic circumstances can result from inflaming the passions of the police. I also know that while most officers are trying to do the right thing, there are also very bad apples who can falsely arrest someone for immediate and improper punishment. That night, I encountered two extremely unethical officers who decided that the way to hurt me the most for speaking badly to them was to falsely arrest my fiancé. I will never forget the smile on their faces when they took you, and the wink they gave me when putting you in the car.

Second, I owe you an apology for failing to bring a civil suit for false arrest against these officers that night. I have now read the reports they wrote and not a single word of my complaint made it into that report. They also refused to include another witness who gave evidence that they falsely identified you. As you know, a witness followed you and I to the detention center and I complained to officers that you were falsely identified and you did not do what they accused you of. I see from the report that they falsely manipulated facts to get around their lack of facts on your identification. They failed to include eyewitness reports. They knew that night that I promised to sue them, and it's clear these reports were written in setting up their defense. They changed the name of a witness who also came forward. They identified you as an assistant district attorney as opposed to a former city prosecutor. I believe this false identification was to evade exculpatory evidence in the report. There's no evidence of a witness Barron when they knew that was not the name of the witness, who happened to be a respected judge. It's possible they called you assistant district attorney as opposed to former city prosecutor as an inadvertent mistake (as these are similar terms) but it is clear they manipulated the report. I promised you I would follow through on bringing a false arrest suit and I did not. I profoundly regret not doing this. I've spent my career attempting to fight for justice for people who are wronged by people in positions of power. I let you down. You deserved better from me.

I recently researched pursuing a false arrest petition now. As this happened almost 15 years ago, it appears that the statute of limitations have expired for false reporting or false arrest. Nevertheless, if the people that did this to you repeat these falsehoods in the public, I will investigate pursuing these charges and justice for you.

I understand that you are seeking to run for the appellate court and this false report is being circulated and used against you unjustly by an opponent. I feel the pain of injustice return that I felt that night. I can't think of a more moral, caring and smart appellate judge. While we haven't spoken in a while, I for one am grateful you are offering to serve our great state.

Sincerely,

John W. Houghtaling, II

Hoagshong advised the judge that I did have a signed warrant, the judge turned and told

Mr. Gagnard that I had a warrant and I had to execute it and then she would have to go with me. I then explained the procedure of where she would be taken and how to get her out and also gave directions to the county jail in DeFuniak Springs. At this time Mr. Gagnard stepped out the front doors of the residence and stated to me, you better have all your it's crossed and your it's dotted because I'm an assistant district attorney and I also do civil litigation for false arrest. At this time Mr. Gagnard was walked to Deputy Corraire's patrol car where she was placed in the back seat and transported to the Walton County Soc. Station. After arriving at the Soc. Station Mr. Gagnard was quickly booked in and placed into a holding cell for approx. 10 minutes at which time she was removed and put back into Deputy Corraire patrol car and transported to the main jail in DeFuniak Springs. Accompanying Deputy Corraire during this transport was Communications Supervisor Deana Smith.
